TAMMANY PRESENTS A MANDATE

Visitors to the House of Representatives' Committee on Judiciary might be excused if they suspected that Conan Doyle, in his spectacular demonstrations concerning the return to earth of departed spirits, had succeeded in bringing back the influences of Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry, since the theories and doctrines of Government which those great patriots preached in the first days of the American Republic were voiced in the same old way—and almost in the same old words—at a recent hearing "to limit the jurisdiction of United States District and Circuit Courts in certain cases." There was under consideration a bill introduced by Congressman Bacharach of New Jersey, proposing to amend the laws relating to the judiciary, so as to take from the Federal courts the right to interfere with the orders of an administrative board or commission of any State. This phantom theory that it is dangerous to the public to permit the Federal Government to enact and carry on successful governing methods was nearly wrecked in the first days of the American Government. A civil war divided the North and the South when the same principle was at stake. Countless battles have been fought in Congress and in every State legislature to determine the rights that were finally accorded to the Federal Government to "regulate" the railroads and many other public utilities.

Some eighteen hundred years ago Marcus Aurelius discovered that "the past is gone, the future yet unseen." The best intellect of two centuries of American civilization has agreed that the "future yet unseen" can be trusted in its common government of all the people. And therefore, why not suspect Conan Doyle and his occult agencies, when we find appearing before a powerful committee of Congress the hallowed political descendant of Jefferson in the flesh of Tammany's distinguished mayor. Mayor Hyland purported to tell the committee that he brought to them a "mandate from the people," and he explained the mandate to be that the Federal Government should turn back the hands of the clock and return to the judicial processes of "states rights," as paramount to the Federal judiciary. Instances were cited by the proponents of the scheme to "reform" the judiciary to show that the Federal courts were accustomed to refuse the common rights claimed by the common people. Mayor Hyland's "mandate" was rather ruthlessly dissected before his own eyes, and the Congressmen must have persuaded him that his election was due to many political circumstances, none of which could be dignified as a "mandate" that affected principles of Government involved in practices in our Federal and State courts.

There does not seem to be the least likelihood that Congress will disturb existing conditions of jurisdiction in the Federal and State courts; and there is not the slightest likelihood that the proposals of the Bacharach bill will be accepted. The matter is interesting principally because the agitation of "states rights" seems to be a good deal like coal strikes that show up every year. It does, however, strengthen one's respect for our government when Congress refuses to be stampeded on these measures. In the case of the Bacharach bill, Mayor Hyland and the politicians who accompanied him were politely and firmly given to understand that they might go along with their affairs and roll their loops.

THE WONDERFUL LADY ASTOR

Lady Astor told an audience the other night that she was a "Virginia patriot, and a very ardent one." It is true that she has returned to her native America to speak as a British member of the House of Commons. But it is doubtful whether England has the deep admiration for this wonderful woman that is being shown her by her former countrymen who are so proud of the fact that an American woman was first of her sex to secure election to the great English lawmaking body. The wholesome philosophies of life voiced by this remarkable woman are perhaps responsible more than ought else for her uncommon popularity. In an inimitable style—something like that of Roosevelt—she has dressed up the old truisms and moralities and flashed them out to her audiences. Lady Astor explained herself on one occasion when she said: "I'm one of those strange people who are never so happy or gay as when I am with people who are trying to be good. I'm a stranger after the Lord. Christianity has not failed, and it is the only thing in the world that never will fail. But a great many Christians have failed." Lady Astor says that children

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

Society Organized in 1847

Church built, 1853

J. H. Little, Pastor, 1909-1922

Morning service at 10:45.

Sunday School at 12.

Evening meeting at 7.

Topic next Sunday evening, "Playing Square With Tomorrow." Reference, 1 Peter, V, 1-11.

The very successful effort of our ladies in observing "Woman's Sunday," and having charge of all parts of the service was a revelation to the men of our parish. The ladies who welcomed the people as they came in, the young ladies who served as ushers, the four who were assigned the duty of taking up the offering, and the one who filled the minister's place in conducting the opening exercises all filled their places with the ease and grace of those who were well accustomed to such service. The address of Mrs. Markey was listened to with close attention. She is a pleasing speaker and the large audience present evidently appreciated every word that was spoken.

The church was tastefully decorated with flowers and potted plants. Appropriate selections by the choir added to the interest of the occasion.

Mrs. Frank King entertained the Circle last week. There was a good attendance. Refreshments were served. The Circle meeting will be omitted this week.

HEED THE WARNING

Many Bethel People Have Done So. When the kidneys are weak they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Weak kidneys usually expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brick-dust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys often cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only. There is no better recommended remedy.

Bethel people endorse Doan's Kidney Pills.

S. J. Haselton, Chapman St., Bethel, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly all right and I gladly recommend them. I had a severe spell of rheumatic trouble and my kidneys showed signs of disorder. My left leg was drawn up and painful and backache annoyed me considerably. Doan's Kidney Pills were advised so I went to Bosserman's Drug Store and got three boxes. When I had finished taking Doan's, I was relieved."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Haselton had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs., Buffalo, N. Y. adv.

CLEVELAND VISITORS CHARMED BY SCENERY

It is a pleasure for anyone who lives in Santa Barbara to meet visitors as appreciative of the city's charm as Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Graham Marshall of Cleveland, Ohio, who with their son, are guests at the Arlington.

In addition to being a recognized philanthropist in his own city, Mr. Marshall has given many evidences of being a sincere lover of beauty. His country place of a thousand acres near Cleveland, has 16 miles of perfect roads which, when the dogwood or wild cherry is in blossom, lead through a land of wild beauty unusual so near a great city. It is fitly called "Rocky Run Farm." Its city home, set in a plot of 11 acres between two small lakes, is considered the most perfect example of English architecture in Cleveland.

Mr. Marshall has declared that he has been entranced by the grandeur of the beauty of "Santa Barbara's union of majestic mountains and shining sea." He has also expressed delight at the landscape gardening effects possible in this climate and admiration of the civic and philanthropic spirit of the community. Among the suggestions of which he has taken note is a swimming pool to be added to his home for boys—on his great estate. And Mrs. Marshall has visualized a pergola around one of the lakes in the city. They will return home by way of the Canadian Rockies.

should be told the facts about evil.

"The fascination of evil is the biggest lie in the world. Don't let others laugh at those of us who are trying to be good. Laugh at them first." In this manner this charming woman spreads her wholesome doctrines. She is gifted with a delightful manner, and a personality that leaves no doubt as to her sincerity. It is little wonder that she has captivated the people of two continents.

COAL STRIKE TAKES ITS COURSE

Despite the fact that Congress has had a committee investigating the coal strike, and that in addition the Department of Justice is busy with prosecutions in relation to the industrial upheaval, there is an apparent disposition in the National Capital to let the coal strike take its course. As there is neither coal shortage nor cold weather to aggravate the situation, the public interest in the strike is not acute outside of the regions in which the mines are located. Some stimulus has been given to the suggestion that labor and arbitration boards be set up by the Government, but in Congress, where measures along these lines are pending, there appears to be an inertia which promises very little for the immediate success of any such legislative methods. It is plain that "watchful waiting" will continue to be the Government policy with reference to the coal strike.

THE TARIFF FIGHT IS ON

The tariff bill is before the Senate. It is a little more than a year late inasmuch as the Republicans promised it as one of the first acts of the Harding Administration. But the tariff-makers never had as hard a job before, owing to the fact that all the tariff-making standards had to be revised to meet the changes made in economic relations with the outside world by the great war. Senators are now making long-winded speeches telling what is good and what is bad about the bill. To the average citizen the subject is minus of thrills. Nevertheless it will be the theme for popular education in the campaign speeches this Fall.

FANCY SALARIES IN SHIPPING BOARD

Congress has been having a hard time with the Shipping Board appropriations measure. Many of the salaries paid to officials of the Board are in excess of the highest amounts that are paid officials like Cabinet officers, Senators and Bureau chiefs. The Shipping Board runs behind about a million dollars a month, and the theory in hiring men who are "supposedly" expert in the shipping business, at salaries of $10,000 and $20,000 a year, contemplates the growth of shipping activities to a point where the Board will not drain the Government quite so hard. It sounds well—but Congress does not appear to agree with the sound—and it is pointed out that Government operation of the shipping business has thus far shown no evidence that it ever will be successful. To this conclusion even the shipping Board agrees.

HAYS GETS ACTION

IN THE MOVIES When Will Hays left the Cabinet of President Harding to direct the affairs of the moving picture world, there was a lot of criticism of his course. It was asked: Could a man do as much for the common good in such a position as it was possible to achieve as head of the Postoffice Department? American moviedom was stunned by the decision to throw two or three million dollars worth of Arbuckle films into the junk pile. It took good nerve to issue such an order, but in doing so Hays has accomplished a good deal towards "cleaning up the movies."

CANTON

Lewis Dexter Small, an esteemed resident of Canton, passed away Wednesday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Ernest Dillingham. Mr. Small submitted to an operation for appendicitis a week ago and since has been seriously ill. He was a native of Peru, a son of Lawson and Melinda Small, and has lived in Canton the greater part of his life. He married Jessie York, a daughter of Mrs. Clara Swett (York) Gammon by a former marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Small had six children, namely, Wm. L. Small of Peru, Eva Small who passed away in young womanhood, Edwin G. Small of Canton, Charlotte (Mrs. Ernest Dillingham) of Canton; Herbert who has passed on and Eldred A. Small of Mechanic Falls. Mrs. Small passed away several years ago. Besides his children Mr. Small is survived by eight grandchildren, a brother, Christopher M. Wonderful Kaieteur Falls

Kaieteur Falls.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

One of the world's greatest waterfalls lies in South America, only a few days steaming from New Orleans and little more than 200 miles inland. This natural wonder of the western hemisphere—Kaieteur falls of British Guiana—is four and a half times the height of Niagara; yet while 3,000,000 persons journey to Niagara each year, only a handful of white men have seen Kaieteur.

The traveler bound for the great falls of Kaieteur does not roll to his destination by rail as do the tourists bent on seeing Niagara or even those visiting the Victoria falls in Africa. Instead he must travel part of the way by river steamers and complete his journey paddled in small boats with a final scramble on foot. For Kaieteur is in the heart of the jungle.

The start is made from Georgetown, British Guiana, on a small steamer which descends the Demerara river. Georgetown itself is well worth a visit. Though in the tropics, it is a comfortable place, kept cool by the steady trade winds well governed. The streets are wide, and through the center of many are canals filled with enormous Victoria Regia water lilies.

The Demerara flows through a low flat country of alluvial mud, so that the tide can be felt 80 miles from the mouth. At Georgetown it is so shallow that the steamers entering the port literally plow through the mud, and at full speed barely crawl to their wharves. Forty years ago a vessel was wrecked off the coast of Guiana, and the mud has built around it until today it is an uninhabited island covered with tall palms. Just outside of Georgetown the river steamer passes the big sugar estate established long ago by grants from the crown.

At the end of the first day the steamer arrives at Wismar. The town is a tiny place, consisting of the landing stage, a railroad station, a store, a gin shop and a few huts. But the fact that it is in the terminus of the Demerara-Essequibo railroad gives it some activity.

This railroad connects the two most important rivers of the province. It is, of course, narrow-gauged and poorly built, but any sort of railroad is a blessing in Guiana. The line runs over ground as sandy as a beach—and indeed that is what it used to be. All the road below that point has been built out into the ocean. Rockstone, terminus of the road on the Essequibo river, is hardly more imposing than Wismar. At Rockstone another river steamer must be boarded for a continuation of the upstream journey. All day the little steamer fights against a current between the monotonous shores. As a matter of fact, one hardly sees the shore itself, for the bush is so thick that it grows out into the river, leaving only lagoons by which the interior can be reached.

Up the Essequibo and Potaro.

The Essequibo is a surprisingly formidable stream. It drains five times the area drained by the Hudson and is twice as long. Some 90 miles above Rockstone the steamer leaves the great river and enters the mouth of the Potaro, itself a stream of no mean proportions. A few hours later Tumatumari, a tiny habitation built on a hill by the side of a cataract is sighted. Tumatumari is the place at which one usually makes contact with the Indian guides and bearers, previously engaged, upon whom dependence must be placed in negotiating the last 50 miles of the journey. The short stretch between Tumatumari and Potaro landing is covered in a small launch, from the latter point on, man power alone is available. A cataract blocks the stream above the landing, and must be passed by portage. The necessary boxes of provisions are strapped on the naked backs of Indians and carried for seven miles through the bush. On such marches one must use every precaution against poisonous snakes.

IT HAPPENED IN NEW ENGLAND

News of General Interest From the Six States

After nearly two years of confinement in the Northampton, Mass., State Hospital following the shooting of her cousin, Dr. Henry Zimmerman, Aug. 7, 1919, Miss Jennie Zimmerman calmly received the news that Gov. Cox had ordered her release on recommendation of the Council.

Andrew J. Tilton, giving his age as 81, a well-known citizen and real estate man, and a retired shoe manufacturer, has filed marriage intentions in Haverhill, Mass. The prospective bride is Miss Therese McMillan, who has been his bookkeeper for 35 years.

The Lawrence, Mass., city council has authorized the use of cast stone as a substitute for granite in trimming the addition to the high school building. It was stated that because of the strike in the granite yards of New England it was almost impossible to obtain quarried granite.

An 800-pound granite cross fell from the top of the 50-foot steeple of Christ Episcopal church, Montpelier, Vt., knocked J. W. Huguley of Burlington, a steeplejack, from his perch on foot from the roof, and then crashed through the roof and floor of the main auditorium. Huguley fell to a ledge. One rib was broken.

Members of the North Adams, Mass., fire department and volunteers were called to fight the biggest forest fire of recent years, which raged on the western slopes of Hoosac mountain. Strained work was required for several hours before the flames were under control. The fire spread along a long portion of the mountain side.

Congressman S. Wallace Dempsey, chairman of the rivers and harbors committee, told a joint assembly of the Northampton, Mass., chamber of commerce and Kiwanis Club that his committee definitely plans to start at the earliest opportunity on the project of making the Connecticut river navigable through from Northampton to Long Island sound.

While relatives were searching for Miss Junia H. Wright, 16 years old, of Woolwich, Me., her collie dog, dragging wet, appeared and led the searchers to an ice pond. The body of the mistress was found in shallow water. Tracks on the shore indicated that the collie had tried to pull her from the pond. Miss Wright had been in poor health.

Edwin Newdale, Boston representative of the Labor Bureau, Inc., speaking before the monthly meeting of the Woman's Trade Union League at Boston on "The Workers' Share in Prosperity and Depression," gave figures alleged to show that some of the mills involved in the present textile strike in New England averaged from 82 to 100 per cent profit per year on their capital stock.

Wilbur H. Lawrence, aged 61, during 22 years up to 1900 an engineer employed by the Maine Central Railroad, was found dead in Lewiston, Me., a pet French bulldog dead at his side. A gunshot wound, pronounced accidental by the medical examiner, explained Lawrence's death, but it was some time before it was determined that the dog had been drowned by its owner.

Gov. Cox of Massachusetts speaking in New Bedford before the Masonic Club, defended the proposed state control of penal and reformatory institutions, declaring that the measure was "not one designed to eliminate county control, but, rather, to evolve a system whereby inmates of the various reform schools and jails throughout the state will be educated through the state will be educated through a general and standardized system of education."

The charter right of the church to assess every taxpayer in the town for its support, was a right in which he believed of its validity was expressed by Rev. Henry W. Mater when preaching the anniversary sermon of the First Congregational church, New Britain. Ct. Mr. Mater said that 164 years ago the Connecticut legislature issued the charter of the church which among rights, gave the church that of assessing every taxpayer in the town for support.

Massachusetts is losing large sums of money yearly in taxation through its failure to legalize reciprocal insurance contracts, according to Wallace D. Williams, who appeared before the House ways and means committee in support of the reciprocal insurance bill which has been favorably reported by the committee on insurance. Reciprocal insurance, which allows merchants to protect their stocks beyond the limit which a fire insurance company may go under the law, is already recognized in 36 states.

According to a preliminary report that has just been issued by the Department of Commerce, through the Bureau of the Census, the total mortgage debt on owned homes and farms in the state of Vermont in 1920 was $23,464,084 and the total value of these mortgaged houses and farms was $20,000,283, the mortgage debt thus representing 36.8 per cent of the total value. Rented houses, tenant farms, and farms that are partly owned and partly rented, it should be noted, are included in this report.

BOSTON MARKET REVIEW

Week Ending April 28, 1922
(Prepared by U. S. Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates)

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES
The week has been a good one from the point of view of the trade, with good buying demand continuing in several important lines. Maine Ben Davis apples dull and lower at 4.00-6.00 per bushel. Northern Russets steady at 5.00-6.00 barrels. Southern Russets dull and mostly too white account recent cold weather, selling mostly 3.00-7.00 a dozen. Northern carrots, cabbage slightly higher at 2.75-3.00 per bushel. Native lettuce dandelions lower at 4.00-1.00 a bushel. Western iceberg lettuce selling better at 1.75-2.00. Texas Bermuda onions declined more than 1.00 bushel, but still slightly, closing at 2.25-2.50 crate. Maine potatoes advanced sharply to 1.35-1.50 per bushel. Early carrots, selling demand from Middle West and rumors of damage to Virginia crops have caused general advance in potato prices over 3.00-5.00 a barrel. Southern strawberries higher at 25-40c a quart. Native rhubarb 1.75-2.00 a lb. Native root vegetables, onions, carrots, turnips, etc., all in bushel box. Beets 1.25-1.50; carrots 1.00-1.25; parsnips 1.75-2.00 for cellar stock and 1.00-1.25 for spring dug; turnips 1.00-1.25.

DALY'S AND POULTRY PRODUCTS

Scarce, of fresh, fair and above demand continued throughout the week and held the market firm. Moderate receipts of Northern butter toward close of the week, with a few large lots moving 3.00-4.00 in a wholesale way, but still some large buyers have difficulty in supplying their wants. Storage butter was also scarce, with a few small lots in prices. Carrots also show 10c advance, 35c score 35c. Easier advices from other markets together with the lack of active buying has caused a general drift of eggs toward the close of the week. Still receipts were not extremely heavy and current receipts at close of market 15c but with but few lots bringing premium. Storage packed cases off and closed 22-23c. Nearly hennery off and ranging mostly 22-24c. Hens at 20c per dozen are in good quantities and some are having difficulty to move them in any large lots at 18c per dozen. The demand showed but little improvement for fresh cheese, reports from country markets caused a minor cooling here. The few lots of cheese moved at 18c per pound. Dailes 19-20c and young Americans. Dealers not inclined to make further contributions. Arrival of nearby live poultry kept Western market, particularly New York, chickens 22-24c, fowls 30-32c. Poultry killed still firm and in limited supply. Little difference in price is noted on frozen chickens from 30-35c. Fowls not so active from 30-35c. Maple sugar at 15c per pound syrup at 1.50-1.60 slow and in ample supply.

BRIGHTON LIVE STOCK AND DISSRESSED MEAT MARKET

Receipts of all classes livestock were light while prices tended firmer. Good quality steers and heifers were 1.50-1.70c; cows and heifers 2.25-3.50 per 100 lbs. Veal calves were steady with good light 1.50-1.75c per 100 lbs. The few choice went at 1.00 per 100 lbs. The few choice went at 1.00 per 100 lbs. The few choice went at 1.00 per 100 lbs.

One of the chief problems confronting the Maine Methodist conferences in Auburn, Me., was whether or not a merger of the two conferences, Maine and Eastern Maine, would be advisable. The commission of 10 representing the two conferences recommended the merger by a vote of 8 to 2.

A gift of $100,000 to Bowdoin college, Brunswick, Me., by Frank A. Munsey, New York publisher and native of Maine, is announced by Pres. Kenneth C. St. Silas. This benefaction, he said, virtually insures to the college the whole of a $600,000 endowment to be devoted largely to increasing the salaries of professors and instructors.

A bequest of $10,000 to endow a free room at the Samaritan Hospital at Troy, N. Y., is made in the will of Margaret Fay Brown of Bennington, Vt. The will provides that the residuary estate, estimated at between $40,000 and $50,000, shall go to Middlebury college to create the Stephen Fay Foundation in memory of the ancestor of the testatrix. Stephen Fay was landlord of the Catamount Tavern in Bennington, which was the meeting place of Ethan Allen's Green Mountain boys and of the Council of Safety before the admission of Vermont into the Union.

Fred H. Wedge, former prizewinner of Arizona, who came to Harvard college last winter to enter the Harvard graduate school, making the trip in box cars, has abandoned his college course and returned to Arizona "Flapper Juries," meaning those composed of girls under 25 years of age, were condemned as one of the evils of the present court system by Mrs. Imogene B. Oakland of Philadelphia in an address before the Woman's Civil Reform Association in Boston. Mrs. Oakland was one of the first women to serve on a jury in Philadelphia.

More than 21,000 men will receive military training in New England this summer, the war department announced. They will be part of a citizen army of 227,000 which will be mobilized in the nine army corps areas of the United States during the summer citizens' military training corps, organized reserves training camps, national guard camps and the camps for reserve officer training corps. In New England 2000 men will receive training in a citizens' military training camp at Camp Devens, 15,200 in national guard camps; 2700 in camps at Camp Devens for the organized reserves training corps; and 224 at the R. O. T. C. camp. The citizens' military training camp for New England will open at Camp Devens August 1, for four weeks.

Prof. Frederic B. Loomis, head of the department of geology at Amherst, Mass., College, is making preparations for the college's eighth expedition in search of fossils. They will hunt for fossil vertebrates, particularly early members of the camel and rhinoceros families. The Amherst collection includes several skeletons and partial skeletons of these two families and the evolution of these families can be shown.

SYNOPSIS.

"No Reason to Disbelieve My Son!"
His Mother Echoed, Scandalized.

CHAPTER I.—Harriet Field, twenty-eight years old and beautiful, is the personal secretary of the flirtatious Madame Carter, at "Crownlands." Richard Ward, her son, is seventeen; his mother, Ninna Carter, is twenty-four years old and impressionable, having fallen in love with her mother's attractive secretary, Carter's latest "affair" is with young Captain Pope, and the youth is varnishing it very seriously.

CHAPTER II.—Presiding over the tea-table this Saturday afternoon, Harriet is profoundly disturbed by the arrival of a visitor, Royal Blondin. Next, make himself agreeable to Nine, and let her drop in.

CHAPTER III.—Harriet's agitation over the appearance of Blondin is explained by the fact that he has been an important element in her life ten years before, and again. The man is an avowed adventurer, living on the gullibility of the idle rich. He has returned to Harriet's intention of marrying Nine. She is the daughter of the wealthy Richard Carter, a highly desirable "catch," and urges him to marry her. She is in a sense in his power, and after some talk with him to abandon his scheme agrees to follow a policy of neutrality.

CHAPTER IV.—Nine visits her married sister, Linda Davenport, who has had her home during her unfortunate acquaintance with Blondin, and to whom she appears. The two women, realising the manipulative nature of the man, view the future with apprehension.

CHAPTER V.—Knowing the tender feelings she has inspired in Ward Carter, Harriet is tempted to marry him for the position and wealth he can give her. She has reluctantly agreed to love him. Blondin, his mother, and his wife, Madame Carter, Richard's mother, and his wife, are wholeheartedly in favor of his marriage with Nine. Ward urges Harriet to marry him at once. She procrastinates.

CHAPTER VI.—Angered at his wife's opposition, Harriet visits young Anthony Pope. Richard Carter mistakenly shows his resentment. Isabella, Richard's mother, and his wife, are wholeheartedly in favor of his marriage with Nine. Ward urges Harriet to marry him at once. She procrastinates.

CHAPTER VII.—Ward Carter again urges Harriet to marry him, but she does not bring herself to an alliance with him for the sake of self-advancement, and refuses. Richard Carter questions her concerning her knowledge of Blondin's intentions, and she admits her opposition to the match. The family, with Harriet, move to a summer establishment on Long Island.

CHAPTER VIII.—Nine puts pressure on Harriet to forward his marriage proposal. Richard Carter questions her concerning her knowledge of Blondin's intentions, and she admits her opposition to the match. The family, with Harriet, move to a summer establishment on Long Island.

CHAPTER IX.—In the new home Harriet, with Madame Carter and Nine, sets down for vacation. In a frank talk with Linda, Harriet reveals her secret: Blondin's unorthodoxness but it has little effect on the infatuated girl. On Richard Carter's insistence, Harriet is installed as a governess in a household which makes her position untenable, declares her intention of leaving. Richard makes an offer of marriage, as a way out of the situation, Harriet considering such an impossible wish. Mrs. Carter (though divorced) is still alive, refuses and leaves the house. To her old-fashioned taste, Richard Carter, though he has granted a divorce from his wife, does not free him from his marital ties, and marriage with him is impossible.

CHAPTER X.—At her sister's home, Nine helps to bring her small nephew safely through an attack of diphtheria. Linda continues to prove Harriet's stand on the question of Ward's fitness as a son-in-law. David Davenport, Linda's brother-in-law, warmly presses his suit, and Linda has about made up her mind to accept him, while Richard Carter disappears with the announcement that Isabella is dead and an obstacle to his marriage with Harriet remains. The girl yields, and the wedding is quickly arranged. Harriet offers to tell Richard the circumstances of her entanglement with Blondin, but he refuses to listen.

CHAPTER XI.—The news of their mother's death, shocking to Ward and Nine, is softened by Harriet's comforting. The three take a trip to Bermuda, and during the journey Richard Carter realises that he is deeply in love with Harriet, though their marriage has simply been one of convenience.

Richard went downstairs, surprised to feel still vaguely unsatisfied. He had had his word with Harriet, had said indeed much that he had not expected to say. However, it was much better to let the world know their relationship; he was perfectly satisfied to have it so. But still, as he settled himself to an hour's reading, the plugging little impulse persisted. He would like to go upstairs again; he missed her companionship.

There was something very appealing about this woman, thought Richard, suddenly closing his book. Her beauty, her silences, her complete subjugation of her own interests to his, he found strangely fascinating.

"By George, she has made a most interesting woman of herself!" Richard decided, opening his book again. "She ought to be right in the middle of things, that girl!"

A day or two later Madame Carter came out to the terrace at eleven o'clock, beautifully groomed and gowned, and with an imperious hand arrested Harriet, who was tumbling and sunburned from the tennis court and was going toward the house.

"Just a moment, Miss Field," said the magnificently. Harriet obediently stood still, and watched Madame Carter's magnificence settle itself kiss each other.

At luncheon everything was exactly as usual; Richard had gone to the city, not to return for a night or two, and several social engagements distracted the young people from the contemplation of their father's affairs.

Harriet had not dared to hope that they would accept the situation so quietly, or that the world would. There were callers on the terrace every afternoon, there were pleasant congratulations and good wishes, there were a few paragraphs in the social weeklies. Richard had for years been too busy for mere entertaining, and the dinner parties and luncheons to the new Mrs. Carter, it was generally felt, must wait until next season.

To glances at the gold ring on her finger made Harriet feel as if a happiness almost shameful was bared to view. Her new position, modestly as she filled it, was yet a high position. She saw Richard's growing affection and trust, if he did not. She could afford to wait.

"But where are you and Dick Carter going to dine with us?" Mary Putnam said, one afternoon, at tea. Madame Carter, whose Victorian ideal of romance was not at all dissatisfied with the idea of the employer marrying his daughter's beautiful governess, smiled significantly.

"They're very old lovers, my dear," she said to Mary with an eloquent glance. Mary laughed, and looked at Harriet, whose face was suddenly crimson, though she tried to laugh, too. The visitor, with instant kindness, covered the little break.

Harriet waited, amused, annoyed, impatient.

"I understand," Madame Carter said, "that you and my son—for some reason best known to yourselves—have entered into a secret marriage."

"Your first object, my dear, is not to antagonise your mother!" Harriet reminded herself. Aloud she said mildly:

"You have no reason to disbelieve it, have you?"

"No reason to disbelieve my son!" his mother echoed, scandalized.

Nina was safe now. That you trusted me, and I had every reason to trust you."

Harriet looked away for a brief

"I hope, and we all hope, that you will marry some day," Richard said. "But you are too young now to make a wise choice. And until you are a little older, you will have to take my word for it that such an affair would only lead you to misery and regret."

Nina mumbled something bravely.

"I didn't hear you," his father said.

"I said, I didn't see what you could do about it!" the girl repeated, desparately.

For a few moments of silence Richard merely looked gravely at his daughter. Then he clasped his fine hands on the desk before him, and cleared his throat.

"I cannot do as much as I should like, Nina," he conceded, "but I shall do what I can. But first let me ask you: have you promised to marry Mr. Blondin?"

Silence. Nina looked at the floor.

Richard repeated his question,

"Yes, I have—and you can't kill me for it!" Nina said, and burst into tears.

"Well," the father resumed, when Harriet had supplied a consolatory murmur and a handkerchief, "I'm sorry, of course. Mrs. Tabor carried letters between you, did she? You met him occasionally?"

"Two or three times," Nina said, sniffing and drying her eyes busily.

"You know my reasons for disliking him, Nina," his father said. "He is a man more than twice your age; he has a certain sort of unsavory reputation in his affairs with women. He has no income, no profession, no home; all those things tell against him. You're only a child."

"I shall be of age Tuesday!" Nina burst forth, resentfully.

"You will be of age Tuesday. True, But you will be my ward, as far as your Uncle Edward's legacy is concerned, for another three years. Now, Nina, if you persist in this folly, against my most earnest advice, I can only forbid you the man the house, and lock you in your room in the good old-fashioned way. That I shall do. I shall then give out to the world—that has already had a rare treat at the expense of the Carter family—the news of my utter disapproval of the match. If you manage the marriage in spite of me, I shall forbid you and Blondin my house, and as a matter of course use my right to withhold the payment of your legacy for three years, and stop your present allowance, and your credit with the shops. That's all I can do! And I do, Nina," said Richard in a softer tone, "to hasten the inevitable, my dear! I do it to bring you back to your father sooner instead of later; to give you only one year of disillusionment and suffering, instead of seven or eight!"

It must be a brave girl, thought Harriet, who could persist in any course, after that. But Nina had the impregnable armor of ignorance and pride, and she only sniffling pathetically again, and shrugged her shoulders.

"You do everything in the world to make my marriage a failure!" she said with the irrepressible tears. "And I suppose you'll be delighted if it is! And I don't see—if a woman can marry a rich man, why a man shouldn't sometimes be glad if a girl has money! I'm proud to help him out, if he'll let me. He says he won't—why, we had planned going—well, just everywhere, Honolulu and southern California and just everywhere, only now he won't go! He says he is going to stay right here, and take a position with an art magazine that he just hates, and work it off—before we go, if it takes years!"

THE POSTMASTER GENERAL TO THE AMERICAN PUBLIC

express train, and the automobile. Each constitutes an epoch in American history. And now the Postal Service, fulfilling its design as a means of communication, has undertaken to adopt the radio to the needs of the people. This most recent achievement makes it possible for me to talk to-night to thousands of people scattered over a wide area, just as it carries into thousands of homes in the city and country daily messages from the seat of our Government in the form of weather and market reports. Thus at the outset the Postal Service is participating in the development of this latest means of communication and adapting it to practical, every-day use of the individual.

I wonder if there are not many persons who, like myself before I joined the army of postal workers, accept the manifold service rendered by this great organization without thinking of the multitude of parts which make up the whole. I am reminded of the machinery of a powerful, easy-running automobile, incased in a beautiful body, which effectively conceals the engine, eads, and shafts which enable us to glide along so smoothly and rapidly. When the machinery is well oiled and in good running order, we are not interested in the component parts; but let a cog slip, and immediately we awaken to the fact that there is after all something inside which demands attention. We may denounce it emphatically, but don't we do something more? Don't we either remedy the fault ourselves, or have some one else do it?

Now, I wish you would liken this situation to the operation of the Postal Service. The railroad, the automobile, and the airplane represent parts of the machinery, as do the quarter of a million employees scattered throughout the United States. The control is centered here in Washington, and we will say that the postal officials here and elsewhere take the place of the chauffeur driving the automobile. The body of the car may be likened to the post-office lobby where you transact your business. Now, if you were riding in this car and something went wrong with, say, the transmission, as will often be the case despite the skill of your chauffeur, wouldn't you call his attention to the situation if he had not already learned of it and give him a chance to fix the car before declaring it to be ready for the scrap heap?

You may be sure that with men, as well as with machinery, a cog will slip now and then; but of this you may be equally certain, the Postal Service is working 24 hours daily striving to give you the same efficient, easy-running service which you might expect from the high-priced automobile I have mentioned. It is not run for profit, but for the benefit of mankind. You may expect to get more than your money's worth. It serves without distinction of persons, for it carries the poor man's letter and parcel just as cheaply and promptly as the millionaire's.

In our constant striving for perfection, we bespeak your cooperation. To this end we have announced a Postal Improvement Week to begin on May 1, when we confidently hope to reach a high degree of perfection in rendering your service. The friendly attitude of the patrons has been an inspiration to us who are charged with the administration of the Postal Service; and we hope next week to express our appreciation by giving you even better service than heretofore. Your continued assistance is essential to our success, however, and I am going to ask you to do your share by plainly and correctly addressing your mail matter. Your postmaster and the newspaper will bring to your attention various other ways in which you may help us. Then, if you do not get the particular kind of service you may think you are entitled to receive, tell your postmaster about it, or write to the department here in Washington. Help us to keep the cogs from slipping!
